PULASKI, TENN., FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 13th, 1886

Prison Life of Jefferson Davis.
We are indebted to Osborne & Co. for a copy of this great book, as well as for a copy of "Bill Arp, so-called," both of which should be in every southern household. We have heretofore made copious extracts from both works, and our readers ought to know exactly what they are. We refer the reader to an article on our second page for a more extensive notice of the former. The latter needs no further recommendation at our hands, so-called. Osborne has a large supply of them on hand.

We notice also a fresh supply of other interesting and popular works, among which we mention "Armada," by Wilkes Collins—"Barry of Eagles' nest," by John Estlin Cook—"The Apostles," by Ernest Renan—"Junius Brutus Booth," (the elder) by his Daughter. We have not time to notice these books separately, and in detail, but we assure our readers that they are the popular books of the day.

Plantation Implements.
It is to every farmer's interest, now that labor is so scarce and expensive, to supply himself with all kinds of labor-saving machines needed on a farm. Messrs. J. D. Flautt & Co. are prepared to furnish Straw Cutters, Reaping and Mowing Machines, Kentucky Cider Mills, &c., of the best pattern and manufacture, and at the lowest rates possible. They are also agents for all kinds of Threshers and Horse Powers.

We would especially urge upon our fruit growers the importance of making cider-vinegar and drying all the fruit possible. The apple crop of the north being a failure this year, these articles are bound to command good prices. Every farmer who has oaks should have a straw cutter. The cost of it may be saved in one year.

Our Thanks.
If heartfelt thanks will repay our friends for the substantial favors they have done us during the week, then be the debts paid.

We heard the remark the other day that the cleverest people in the world lived around (the) Vale Mills, and we are fully prepared to substantiate the truth of the remark.

Rev. Mr. Motherall has the honor of furnishing this department with a mess of the largest potatoes of the season.

We are again under obligations to our full-breasted friend Jas. F. McKissack, for a basket of those delicious apples. His basket is full of heart, and his heart full of kindness toward us.

We are under renewed and lasting obligations to Mrs. Anis for more of those substantial favors so highly appreciated by those who have no vegetable gardens. She has sent us the first mess of roasting ears, several messes of potatoes, and a beet which weighed 34 pounds.

Ladies' Benevolent Association of Tenn.
From a statement recently published we learn that 20 artificial legs have been donated by the Association, 19 of which cost $150 each, and the other $135. The total cost of these limbs was $2,955.

In addition to the above, 25 artificial legs are now under contract at a total cost of $3,525. Two of the latter are for Giles county boys, viz: J. J. Phillips, Co. H. 32nd Tenn., and James P. Moore, Co. K. 1st Tenn.

Seven applications for artificial limbs have gone forward from this county, and in due time they will all be supplied. These limbs will cost the Association not less than $1,000. Of this sum our county Association has paid into the treasury only $243. Is this not enough to bring a blush to the cheek of every citizen of the wealthy and patriotic County of Giles? Need we make any other appeal in behalf of the Association? Shall it go to the world that Giles, one of the wealthiest counties in the State, refuses to put a half dozen of her brave boys on their feet again? We shall watch the progress of affairs and wait for an answer. The officers of our Association have done their duty. They have labored assiduously, and made appeal after appeal to our people, but the patriotic fires and philanthropic promises of 1861-2 seem to have been extinguished and forgotten. We hope to chronicle better things in the future.

The Picnic.
This is Wednesday morning, and the excesses of last night weigh heavily upon us corporeally and mentally. We went to the picnic yesterday, and the excessive part of it was that we were pic-nic-ing all night. The train was to have brought us home at 9 p. m., but it was 3 this morning when this reportorial head found a pillow.

However we had that which gives to everything a true relish—good company—and without which all things are like painted grapes, seen, not tasted. And if there were any ideas lurking in the confused brain of this reporter, the picnic of yesterday might inspire poetic thoughts. But we are completely wilted. The fields were laughing at us as we went down on the train, and the birds and the girls sang to us after we got there, but the laughing was no more joyous nor the singing more glorious, than the picnic-ground was picturesque and beautiful. Situated in the lap of those grand old hills around the tunnel, it looked like the very nursery of content. Here the steam saw mill of Messrs Harrison & Lester, to whom and to which we were all indebted for so much that contributed to the pleasure of the occasion, turns out excellent lumber, among which we noticed some most admirably suited to the purposes of some folks in enlarging their tables and making cribs.

It would be too great a task for this dilapidated concern to give the incidents of the occasion in detail. It is enough to say, we had a good dinner and plenty of fun, and as these are the things we went for, what more can we say?

The sparkling bon mot, the repartee—the glances and soft words—the rich sallies and attractive—travels—Emmas and Ettas—Matties and Maggies—dec., &c., stole the hours away and beguiled the fatigue. But some poet has said,
"Tis of books the chief
Of pleasures to be brief, and as this accords with our feelings just now we close this interesting volume."

We notice among the compositions read by members of the graduating class at the Columbia Atheneum, one by Miss IRENE BUFORD—"The Fight of Time,"—and one by Miss SOLONIA ROSS—"Night brings forth the Stars."

At the conclusion of the exercises an interesting address was delivered by Col. S. E. ROSE, of this place.

New Music.—We tender our acknowledgments to D. P. Faulds, Louisville, for a thrilling polka, entitled "Our Generals," with a pretty vignette, adorned with the likenesses of Gen. Lee, Jackson, Johnston, Beauregard, Price, Longstreet, Hill, Hardee and Bragg. The likenesses alone are worth the money, and the music, by Charly Ward, is said to be grand.

Tar Tr.—It is said that hog's lard is the best thing to give hens to make them lay. Mix it with their feed—a small piece as big as a walnut will set a hen to laying immediately after she has been broken up from her setting—and thus hens lay throughout the whole winter. Will some one try the experiment and then report the same?

Why are books the best friends? Because when they bore you, you can always shut them up without offense.

Tournament at Huntsville.
We thank our contemporaries of the Independent for an invitation to the grand Tournament to be given at Huntsville, Ala., on the 26th and 27th inst., for benevolent purposes. The lists are open to the world and Knights from all parts of the country are invited to enter their names, and participate in the exercises, which promises to be the most exciting and interesting ever witnessed in this country. The programme is full and attractive, and ample arrangements have been made to entertain and accommodate all who may attend. Extra trains will be run on the Nashville and Decatur and Memphis and Charleston roads. The programme may be seen at this office. Unfortunately it did not fall under our eye in time to publish this week.
